

I can't believe it's been two years. It feels like time just went by really fast for me. Since the moment I started talking to you, I knew you were special. I mean remember how I kept saying I used to see your name in my head and few months later we started talking to each other. I had no clue I would love someone this much and it continues to grow day by day. I wish I could show you how much I love you. It is impossible. I wish to be a better man for you. I hope I can keep you happy for the rest of the days to come. You made me a better person in so many ways with my OCD. You've given me hope so many times and I am really grateful for that. Every time I hold you or even touch you, I feel the same way I felt when I first held you or touched you. I just can't explain the feeling. Thank you for being there for me and handling me. I will love you for the rest of the days to come. Happy two years anniversary my love

I love you
